Legislated teacher deal finds support

Controversy.

Government-mandated contracts have drawn fire in other provinces

 JEREMY NOLAI
Metro in Calgary

Alberta's education minister has asked two-thirds of school boards in the province if they would support a legislated teachers' contract, and some trustees openly agree with the idea, a spokesperson said Sunday.

Education Minister Jeff Johnson has been gauging support with boards during meetings held ahead of the provincial budget unveiling in March, press secretary Kim Capstick said.

She added that the idea of a legislated deal was originally pitched to the minister in a meeting shortly after tripartite talks on a new provincewide deal failed in December, throwing negotiations to local bargaining for the first time in five years.

"I think, for the most part, people are just anxious about any possibility of labour disruption in the classroom — but I don't think we're there yet," Capstick said, adding the ministry is hearing reports that some negotiations aren't going as quickly as initially hoped.

Sticking points during original negotiations included an Alberta Teachers' Association wish to restrict assigned hours for members and a government move to remove that group's veto power on instructional policy and legislation.

Elaine Horner, vice-chair for the Prairie Land Regional Division, said her board met with Johnson on Jan. 17 and was "non-committal" on a legislated deal.

"I know that the government was disappointed when the ATA walked away from the tripartite table," she said, before adding a government-mandated contract would allow the ATA to "do what they really should be doing and that's being the professional organization (for teachers) instead of a union."

Jean Boisvert, vice-chair for Elk Island Catholic Schools, also confirmed talks of a legislated deal when his board met with Johnson, but admitted he has concerns.

"We'd like to be able to finish our process," he said. "Legislation always seems to leave a bad taste in people's mouths."

Sales tax an online budget tool, but not in government's plan

It has the power to turn Alberta's deficit into a healthy surplus, without cutting a single government service, but the government is adamant a sales tax will not be coming to the province.

While the government insists it's not on the table, the sales tax is an option on the government's online budget tool at www.budgetchoice.ca.

A five-per-cent sales tax would bring in $5 billion in revenue, turning the government's projected $2.6 billion deficit to a $2.4 billion surplus.

Finance Minister Doug Horner's spokesperson Robyn Cochrane said the sales tax is on the budget calculator only to show options.

"It's not telegraphing what we are putting into the budget. It's just a reasonable amount of options for someone to play with it," she said.

Cochrane said the point is to demonstrate the challenge government faces.

"It is not just as easy as cutting salaries for mid-level managers and you balance the budget," she said.

Bill Moore-Kilgannon, with Public Interest Alberta said a sales tax is a bad idea, because it would unfairly punish poorer people who spend most of their income.

"I think the government

Edmonton charities cash in on penny's demise

Change. Businesses being told to round cash transactions to the nearest nickel beginning today

ANNALISE KLINGBEIL
annalise.klingbeil@metronews.ca

Pennies have been rolling into Edmonton charities ever since the government announced the one-cent coin's demise last spring.

As the phase-out of the penny continues, with businesses being urged to round cash transactions to the nearest nickel beginning Monday, several non-profit organizations are tallying up totals from their penny-drives.

Volunteers at Habitat for Humanity Edmonton have spent the past eight months

Rolling 'em up

- Edmonton's Food Bank has collected nearly $800 in pennies and has bins full of change waiting for volunteers to roll at an upcoming roll-off.
- ABC Head Start has raised more than $1,800 through their penny drive, with donations continuing to trickle in.

collecting and rolling more than 1 million of the copper-coloured coins.

"(That's) a heck of a lot of pennies," said Alfred Nikolai, CEO of the organization.

Nearly $12,000 in pennies were donated to the charity and Nikolai said the organization had "a lot of fun" with the spare change.

Needing people to roll

Pennies are piling up for charities, as the government phases out the one-cent coin. METRO FILE the coins became a way to bring in new volunteers and having corporations donate pennies helped introduce the community to the charity's work, he said.

"It's hard to raise money, it really is," Nikolai said. "We used (the penny drive) to engage different people that never probably would have supported us before."

RCMP kept a close eye on the Occupy Ottawa protest

Access-to-information request. Documents show Mounties nabbed pamphlets, monitored social media sites and counted participants

The Mounties compiled a dossier on the Occupy Ottawa movement, scouring social media and quizzing campus security after protesters held planning sessions at a university, newly released documents show.

Meeting notes show there were also plans to monitor the Confederation Park protest site using a camera mounted to the nearby offices of the National Capital Commission (NCC).

The camera is normally pointed at Ottawa's city hall, the notes say. However, the NCC says it does not operate the camera and it did not use the device to monitor protests.

The documents show NCC

staff did keep close tabs on the makeshift encampment throughout the occupation, snapping dozens of photographs and reporting on the protesters' activities.

Details about the surveillance tactics are only now coming to light, some 14 months after police ousted the Occupy Ottawa protesters from Confederation Park in late November 2011. It took the NCC until last week to provide documents in response to an access-to-information request.

Notes from a meeting held before the Ottawa occupation started show there was talk the protesters might also target Parliament Hill, the prime minister's residence, the Privy Council Office and the U.S. Embassy.

An RCMP intelligence report shows the Mounties picked up Occupy pamphlets and literature after the protesters met at the University of Ottawa. They also questioned campus security about the number of people in the room.

Pulled from the rubble. Adherence to safety protocols will be examined in deaths of two workers

Quebec's provincial police and workplace safety board have launched an investigation into a deadly landslide at a quarry near Montreal.

Officers will try to determine the circumstances of the accident now that the recovery effort is over, said police spokesman Gregory Gomez on Sunday.

The bodies of two missing workers — a woman and a man — were pulled from the rubble on Saturday, four days after a landslide at the gravel quarry in L'Epiphanie.

Police will examine whether the company operating the quarry, Maskimo Construction Inc., followed the appropriate safety protocols, Gomez said in an interview.

"We've done some analysis on the site and in the pit," he said.

"We're going to try to determine what happened, the sequence of events and if there is criminal wrongdoing in this incident."

Maskimo Construction has come under scrutiny before. The company was fined in 2008 after failing to follow safety protocols when a work-

The company held a press conference on Saturday extending its sympathies to the victims' families and promising to co-operate with investigators.

When survivor Benoit Robert spoke with reporters last week, he said he didn't blame his employer and described them as responsible.

Jacques Nadeau, spokesman for Quebec's workplace safety board, said the investigation would include interviewing workers at the site and geological experts.

London, England

Man Tasered outside royal palace

Police used a stun gun to arrest a man armed with knives outside Buckingham Palace on Sunday, as throngs of tourists gathered to watch the Changing of the Guard ceremony there.

Scotland Yard said the man was spotted carrying two knives outside the central gate of the London tourist landmark. He did not threaten other people at the scene but acted aggressively when challenged by police.

A video posted to YouTube showed the man putting a kitchen knife to his neck and shouting. He took several swipes at a policeman, who fired the stun gun.

Witnesses said the man had broken through a security cordon and was attempting to walk toward the palace guards when he was stopped by police.

Victoria, B.C.

Super Bowl trip goes to pot

A decades-old pot possession charge cost a Victoria man the trip of a lifetime.

Myles Wilkinson beat nearly four million contestants to win a trip to the Super Bowl in New Orleans, but his victory went up in smoke when Toronto airport border guards blocked him from crossing this week due to a 32-year-old charge for less than two grams of cannabis.

At the time, a teenaged Wilkinson paid a $50 fine.

This is an "all too common" story, said Larsen, director of the Sensible B.C. campaign to hold a referendum on decriminalizing cannabis.

"Any kind of possession conviction means a lifetime ban on crossing the U.S. border," Larsen said, adding that someone charged but not convicted can still be refused entry to the States.

Wilkinson plans to join the Sensible B.C. campaign.

Iraq exchange gets first major stock float

Irqi mobile phone service provider Asiacell sold a 25 per cent stake to investors Sunday on the Iraq Stock Exchange in what the head of the bourse said is the biggest initial public offering in the Middle East since 2008.

Taha al-Rubaye also said it's the first major stock float on the ISX, which was set up in 2004, a year after a U.S.-led invasion toppled Iraqi dictator Saddam Hussein.

The floatation, which raised close to $1.3 billion, was seen as a test of investor confidence in the country. It could reassure international investors, many of whom remain wary of the risky Iraqi market, influenced by continued sectarian violence and political deadlock.

A slew of streaming music services have come to Canada, and more are likely on the way, but while tech-savvy consumers seem to enjoy listening to music online, relatively few want to pay.

There are more than a dozen competitors to choose from in Canada, including free radio-style options such as CBC Music and Songza, and fee-based à la carte listening platforms with millions of songs to access, such as Deezer, HMV's The Vault, Rara and Rdio.

A recent report by the Department of Canadian Heritage suggested many Canadians are interested in streaming — but most want it to be free.

About one in three poll respondents said they were very or somewhat likely to subscribe to a free online music service, while just 17 per cent said they would likely pay a monthly fee for a subscription-based service.

Twitter hacking may affect 250K accountsCyberespionage.

Company has not said whether China is behind security breach

Twitter is among the latest U.S. companies to report that it is part of a growing list of victims of Internet security attacks, saying that hackers may have gained access to information on 250,000 of its more than 200 million active users. And now, The Washington Post is joining the chorus, revealing the discovery of a sophisticated cyberattack in 2011.

Twitter said in a blog post on Friday it detected attempts to gain access to its user data earlier in the week. It shut down one attack moments after it was detected.

But Twitter discovered that the attackers may have stolen user names, email addresses and encrypted passwords belonging to 250,000 users they describe as "a very small percentage of our users." The company reset the pilfered passwords and sent emails advising the affected users.

In this 2010 file photo, Twitter's then-CEO Evan Williams makes a presentation about changes to the microblogging service at the company's San Francisco headquarters. Twitter says hackers may have gained access to information on 250,000 of its more than 200 million active users. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

The Twitter attack comes on the heels of recent hacks into the computer systems of U.S. companies, including The New York Times and The Wall Street Journal. Both newspapers reported last week that their computer systems had been infiltrated by China-based hackers, likely to monitor media coverage the Chinese government deems important.

On Friday, The Washington Post disclosed that it was also the target of a sophisticated cyberattack, which was discovered in 2011 and was first reported by an independent cybersecurity blog.

Twitter didn't provide any clues as to whether it believes that China was behind its hack. However, the blog post by the company's director of information security, Bob Lord, made clear that the hackers knew what they were doing. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WHEN LIFE GIVES YOU THE TASK OF NAMING THE LRT...

URBAN COMPASS
Terence Harding
edmonton@metronews.ca

Here is a quote that might make you laugh.

"We are delighted that so many citizens were involved in suggesting names for our future LRT System lines," said Cory

Sousa, city planner, who works with the Naming Committee. "Naming our LRT System lines is an important part of growing our city."

Let me see if I have this right. The city chose five names for LRT lines from 900 suggestions that were submitted. As unlikely as it is, let's assume that everyone who took the city's online survey suggested only one name. We have a population of about 812,000 people according to the latest information available from the city. That would mean a whopping .001 per cent of the population took part in the survey. Even if we cut the population number in half to allow for children and the computerless, that's still only .002 per cent of residents. If everyone submitted five names, it would mean an infinitesimal number of Edmontonians thought naming LRT lines was worth their time.

Based on Mr. Sousa's ebullient remarks, the city must have a mandatory course on how to make lemonade when the public hands you lemons.

I have to wonder how many responses the city would get if it put a survey on its website asking us if we think the names that were chosen are stupid or if the exercise was completely unnecessary. Those would be survey results I would really like to see.

I believe it was the same Mr. Sousa who would not divulge the names of the people who helped in selecting the LRT line names. His response was to say that they were all "professionals." Professional what? Professional means, doctor, lawyer, accountant and such. What on Earth would make the city think that those professions would be any better at picking a good name than you, me or my aunt Millie? Given the abysmal quality of the names that were chosen, I am not surprised those "professionals" choose to remain nameless.

Professional namers? Let's assume that professional means, doctor, lawyer, accountant and such. What on Earth would make the city think that those professions would be any better at picking a good name than you, me or my aunt Millie? Given the abysmal quality of the names that were chosen, I am not surprised those "professionals" choose to remain nameless.

According to Mr. Sousa, naming our LRT lines is an important part of growing our city. Really? I would have thought there were many more important things for the city to concern itself with. But if LRT line naming is so important, how were the existing lines named? Was there some survey in the past that I somehow missed?

Scientists on Monday will announce the results of tests meant to determine whether a skeleton found under a parking lot in central England belongs to 15th-century King Richard III, the last English monarch to die in combat.

Researchers at the University of Leicester have analyzed the bones, which were discovered during an archeological dig in September. The skeleton showed signs of Richard's famed spinal curvature and of fatal battle wounds.

Scientists compared its DNA with samples taken from a Canadian family that is a direct descendant of Anne of York, Richard's eldest sister.

Jeff Ibsen says he was warned long ago that his family might be called upon if the king's burying place was ever discovered.

Dogs ditch chicken for carrot sticks

Willie, a dachshund, begs for a carrot in Toronto. Willie's owner, Ken Butland, says his two dogs quickly adapted to their new vegan diet and now can't get enough of it. Vegan diets for dogs are becoming increasingly prevalent in Toronto as owners who follow the vegan lifestyle are implementing it on their pets.

But not all veterinarians agree that a vegan diet is the best choice for dogs.

- Vegan diets for dogs involve more than feeding them raw vegetables.
- Canines rely on dry vegan dog food for nutrients such as protein that they would have ingested through eating meat.
- Dogs, unlike cats, are natural omnivores who have the enzymes to break down the nutrients from a vegan diet and assimilate them for daily use, according to a Toronto veterinarian.

Not the best idea for all dogs: Expert

Veterinary technician Krista Wilcox tends to dogs at the Front Street Animal Hospital in Toronto and would only recommend a vegan diet when food allergies are present.

Wilcox says that if a diet isn't properly formulated for each individual need, even if it is a vegan diet, there can be side effects.

"An improper diet will cause a pet to, over time, show malnutrition," she said. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Chilly winter warmed by big hearts

News worth sharing

Media will always have to report on the tough stuff. But we know that Canada is full of compassionate individuals, inspiring projects and stories worth celebrating. Here's just one.

Food banks often face an uphill battle after the holidays, with high need and low donations.

But for Camrose residents, helping solve this problem was as easy as sliding down a hill.

On a snowy Sunday afternoon last month, hardy families bundled up and headed to Jubilee Park for a toboggan day where the price of admission was a non-perishable food donation.

All proceeds went to Neighbor Aid, a local organization that runs several community programs including a food bank, soup kitchen and school breakfast clubs.

The event was a perfect way for families to make the most of a bracing winter day, while also making an impact in the lives of local families who will be undoubtedly grateful for the kindness.

It's all downhill from here!

Juno's new host with the most

Ladies, you might want to sit down for this: Michael Bublé has been revealed as the host of the 2013 Juno Awards gala.

The charming Vancouver crooner, who's proved a quick-witted hit at the podium whilst collecting numerous Juno and Grammy trophies in the past, announced his forthcoming duties in a characteristically droll TV spot aired during CTV's Super Bowl broadcast on Sunday night. It found him lounging in bed trading quips with Can-rock couple Chad Kroeger and Avril Lavigne. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Justin Timberlake performs in New Orleans, La. GETTY IMAGES

One of the most anticipated musical moments of the year so far was connected to the Super Bowl, but had nothing to do with Beyoncé.

Instead, it was Justin Timberlake who had New Orleans buzzing as he gave his first performance in nearly five years — a sizzling, hour-long concert that featured the nattily dressed entertainer with a more than 10-piece band and guest appearances by Timbaland and Jay-Z. The performance was all part of DirecTV's Super Bowl-eve bash.

Timberlake hadn't released new music in years, instead concentrating on acting. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Beyoncé delivers the goods at Super Bowl

Now put your hands up. She put a groove on it — and this time it was live Beyoncé sang like she had something to prove at the Super Bowl, balancing out the testosterone levels on the football field with a dance-heavy performance that featured her Destiny's Child band mates and an all-female band.

She emerged onstage singing some of Love on Top, transitioning to her hit Crazy In Love in an all-black ensemble, which matched the dark stage. She ripped off part of her shirt and skirt as she danced hard with background dancers doing the same.

She sang live — and sounded good. Days after admitting to singing to a pre-recorded track at President Barack Obama's inauguration, she proved herself to any doubters and added a few off-script remarks as if to show her microphone was on.

Her background singers helped out as Beyoncé danced around the stage throughout most of the 13-minute performance. She was especially top-notch during End of Time and Baby Boy.

She had a swarm of background dancers and band members spread throughout the stage, along with videotaped images of herself dancing. And the crowd got bigger when she was joined by her Destiny's Child band mates.

Kelly Rowland and Michelle Williams popped up from below the stage to sing Bootylicious. They were in similar outfits, singing and dancing closely as they harmonized. But Rowland and Williams were barely heard when the group sang Independent Woman, as their voices faded into the background.

They also joined in for some of Single Ladies (Put a Ring On It), where Beyoncé's voice grew stronger.

She asked the crowd to put their hands toward her as she belted the slow groove Halo on bended knee — and that's when the performance hit its high note.

Before the game, Alicia Keys performed a piano-tinted version of the national anthem. The Grammy-winning singer played the piano as she sang The Star Spangled Banner in a long red dress.

As 26 children walked to the centre of the Superdome to sing, a packed crowd in the Big East fell silent.

The chorus from Sandy Hook Elementary School, nearly two months after a deadly shooting rampage, joined Jennifer Hudson to deliver a rendition of America the Beautiful that had some players and countless fans in the stands on the verge of tears.

Celebrating Valentine's – all year long

THE WORD

Dorothy Robinson
scene@metronews.ca

Valentine's Day isn't the only time when Nick Cannon and Mariah Carey celebrate their love. Cannon admitted to Metro that the 30th of every month is their I Love You Day and they view that day as their monthly anniversary.

"No matter where we are in the world, even if we're not together on the 30th, we still send flowers and balloons and chocolates and all that good stuff," said the America's Got Talent host.

Considering Cannon and Carey are known romantics (they renew their wedding vows every year), we asked for his advice on how to make the holiday memorable. "The more thoughtful you can be, that shows effort," he says. "If you're going to do flowers, find out that person's favorite and figure out the arrangement yourself."

Nicole Kidman

'No surgery for me,' says Kidman on her age-defying looks

Despite numerous reports to the contrary, Nicole Kidman insists she's never indulged in plastic surgery. "No surgery for me," she tells Italian newspaper La Repubblica. "I did try Botox, unfortunately, but I got out of it and now I can finally move my face again." So does the Australian actress keep her face looking the way it does? "I wear sunscreen, I don't smoke and I take care of myself, and I am proud to say that," she said. "Anybody can do anything to themselves — I don't judge — but personally, I believe in being physically fit."

1) Adele's estranged dad is complaining to a newspaper that she won't have anything to do with him because he talked to a newspaper. 2) Hulk Hogan tweets a picture of daughter Brooke in a mini-dress with the caption "Brooke's legs."

Your move, Selena. After Selena Gomez covers Justin Timberlake's Cry Me A River and Taylor Swift's I Knew You Were Trouble, Justin Bieber releases his own breakup song, Nothing Like This. Selena, may we suggest Häagen-Dazs, a girl's night out and just keeping your pain bottled up inside yourself where it belongs?

Justin Bieber gropes a fan's breast at a meet and greet. Selena Gomez decides to spend two or three days in bed, watching The Notebook over and over and not washing her hair.

Kris Jenner gets her own talk show. Subjects that will be covered during the first week of broadcast: "Kash comes from kids," "Kashing in on cute kids" and "Kids! kan they be konverted into more kash?"

Liberty Ross files for divorce from Snow White and the Huntsman director Rupert Sanders. Not because of the Kristen Stewart cheating thing, but because he made Snow White and the Huntsman.

Carole Mallory, author of a book about her affair with Norman Mailer, has written a new book about sleeping with famous men. In it, she says that Robert De Niro used to keep his socks on. "That totally ruined all my elaborate erotic fantasies involving Robert De Niro," said absolutely no one.

Porn actor James Deen talks about working with Lindsay Lohan on The Cannons. "In porn I am used to working with professionals who are courteous to others," he says. "Whatever," says Lindsay. "I am used to working with family members who would steal my teeth."

Chris Brown claims he didn't throw any punches in a parking lot fight with Frank Ocean. Proof he may be right: 1) He posts on Instagram, comparing himself to a crucified Jesus.

2) Sources say it was only the respective entourages who were fighting. 3) Frank Ocean is not a woman.

The initial version of the Evil Dead remake got an NC-17 rating. The film was eventually edited to get an R, but still retains the "why yes, we did remake/stomp on one of your beloved cultural touchstones" warnings. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Friends since childhood, Ronjiny and Tania always dreamed of doing something creative together. When Ronjiny completed her MBA in design, fashion and luxury goods in Italy, she finally convinced Tania to put her remarkable nature photography to work. The two friends launched a line of luxury, nature-themed scarves under the name of Chobhi, which in Bengali means "picture". They call their creations "wearable art" and will soon expand to include a unique line of jewelry.

"...When we held a scarf in our hands for the first time. I had seen it on Skype from India and it didn't seem real," says Tania, "but when Ronjiny handed it to me, it was amazing and exactly what I had pictured. The colours and designs really stand out on fabric."

Ronjiny is in India right now working on producing their spring line and says, "It's been extremely rewarding to see something you are passionate about bloom and grow. Our wish is that our scarves connect with your heart."

Type your way to the total package by polishing up your online presence

I'm with the brand.

Beyond the resumé, there's a world of ways you can promote your best self on the web

life@metronews.ca

Welcome to the world of social media, where any aspect of your online biography can mean the difference between landing that dream job and getting promptly passed over.

In the process of prioritizing your personal brand, it's imperative that you make sure you accurately portray yourself online as you would in person, ensuring that recruiters receive a fair impression of your character and that they recognize the unique qualities you could bring to their organization.

To help evaluate your online presence, James Davidson, talent acquisition manager for PwC, provides us with five key considerations that will help you improve your digital brand and make you more noticeable than your competitors.

Relevance
People evaluate you based on relevance. This is how consistent the real-world-you is to the virtual-world-you. To increase your volume and relevance on the web, you can showcase your expertise, skills and experiences via online forums, Facebook, LinkedIn and Twitter.

Volume

Volume speaks to how much content is on the web about you — the more you have to say about yourself, the more information people will have on you.

Clarity

Clarity means the ease with which readers can differentiate the content that is about you versus content on others with the same name. It's imperative to secure your vanity name for LinkedIn, Facebook and Twitter. Spending time figuring out the right words to describe yourself is critical.

Diversity

Diversity is having multimedia content supporting the real-world-you. This means sharing photos, quotes, articles and videos — all of which help express your skills, passion and values in another way. For example, people are more likely to believe you and your work experience if you have a professional photo — especially on sites such as LinkedIn.

Validation

Lastly, validation is essential in getting other people to reference you or confirm who you really are. This is extremely important to increasing the credibility of your personal brand. You need to get others to recommend you online, endorse you and provide you with testimonials. By attempting these online suggestions, you will be on your way to building and managing your professional online presence.

When they meet you in person, will you properly reflect the profile you've set up online? iSTOCK

Who would have thought old comfort food, grilled cheese, would make such a comeback — not only as a casual sandwich at home, but also as an elegant appetizer at parties.

Here's a twist on the traditional; I use it as a lunch item, on buffets and even cut into quarters as an appetizer.

1. Divide cheddar, Parmesan and goat cheese between two slices of bread. Top with sliced tomatoes and onions. Cover with remaining two slices of bread. Spray both sides of each sandwich with cooking oil.

Ingredients

Prep time: 10 minutes
Cooking time: 8 minutes

- 1/4 cup light aged cheddar cheese, thinly sliced
- 1/8 cup Parmesan cheese, freshly grated

Nutritional Analysis

Per serving

2. Spray a non-stick skillet with cooking oil and place over medium heat. Cook the sandwiches for approximately 4 minutes per side, being careful not to burn them.

3. Cut each sandwich into quarters and serve 2 per person. ROSE REISMAN'S COMPLETE LIGHT KITCHEN (WHITECAP BOOKS)

Pulled to complete perfection

For this recipe, simply marinate boneless pork for a couple of hours or overnight, then put it in the slow cooker.

The result will be tender enough to be shredded, or "pulled," apart. The sauce can easily be prepared while the pork is cooling.

1. In a bowl, combine 15 ml (1 tbsp) of the brown sugar, paprika, chili powder, mustard and salt. Rub over all sides of pork. Cover and refrigerate for at least 2 hours or overnight.

Ingredients

- 60 ml (4 tbsp) packed brown sugar, divided
- 45 ml (3 tbsp) paprika
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) chili powder
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) dry mustard
- 5 ml (1 tsp) salt
- 1.5 kg (3 lb) boneless pork shoulder blade roast, cut into 4 chunks
- 1 envelope (38.5 g/1.4 oz) onion soup mix
- 375 ml (1 1/2 cups) chicken broth
- 1 ml (1/4 tsp) cayenne pepper
- 375 ml (1 1/2 cups) tomato-based chili sauce
- 45 ml (3 tbsp) cider vinegar
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) soy sauce
- Kaiser buns, warmed
- Coleslaw

This recipe serves eight. THE CANADIAN PRESS H/O

2. Place pork in five to six-quart slow cooker. Whisk soup mix and broth; pour over pork. Cover and cook on low 8 to 10 hours or on high 4 to 5 hours, until pork shreds easily with a fork. Transfer pork to a plate and let cool slightly.

3. Using spoon, remove excess fat from surface of sauce. Pour sauce into a large saucepan and bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer for about 20 minutes, until syrupy. Stir in remaining brown sugar, cayenne, chili sauce, vinegar and soy sauce; simmer for 10 minutes to blend flavours. Adjust seasoning with salt and cayenne, if desired.

4. Transfer pork to a cutting board and add accumulated juices to sauce. Using two forks, shred pork, placing it in a serving bowl. (This is a super-messy job, but worth the effort.) Pour 250 ml (1 cup) sauce over shredded meat, turning pork to absorb sauce. Serve pork on warmed buns, topped with coleslaw, with extra sauce for dipping. BEST OF BRIDGE SLOW COOKER COOKBOOK BY SALLY VAUGHAN-JOHNSTON & THE BEST OF BRIDGE PUBLISHING LTD. Hamelin doubles up on gold in Russia

Short-track star Charles Hamelin won his second gold medal in as many days to lead a three-medal effort by Canadians at the Samsung ISU World Cup on Sunday in Sochi, Russia.

Hamelin, from Sainte-Julie, Que., finished first in the 1,000 metres, while Gabrielle Waddell of Red Deer, Alta., won her first individual medal, taking bronze in the women's 500 metres. Waddell later helped the women's relay team win silver.

Hamelin, who won the men's 500 on Saturday, earned his latest gold with a time of one minute 25.159 seconds.

"I was trying to be more patient and save energy for the end," said Hamelin. "So in the middle of the race, I tried a pass on the outside, but I got caught by the Korean with his deep track and I almost fell. I didn't panic. I got back on my blades and got back to the pack."

"There was a lot of action, but I was able to make my way through to first and win the race. I hope this is going to be a good sign for me in one year."

Semen Elistratov of Russia was second and American J.R. Celski finished third. Jinkyu Noh of South Korea settled for fourth.

Ravens turn off the lights on 49ers

Super Bowl. San Fran nearly climbs all the way back following power outage, but Baltimore holds on to win its second NFL title

From blowout to blackout to shoot-out, Joe Flacco and the Baltimore Ravens had just enough power to survive one of the most electric Super Bowls ever.

The outage flipped a switch for the San Francisco 49ers, but the Ravens used a last-gasp defensive stand to hold on Sunday night, 34-31.

America's biggest sporting event came to a half-hour standstill in the third quarter when most of the Superdome lights and the scoreboards went dark. By then, the Ravens had a 22-point lead.

Everything changed after that, though, and the 49ers staged a sensational rally before Ray Lewis and Co. shut it down. But there were plenty of white-knuckle moments and the Ravens (14-6) had to make four stops inside their seven at the end.

For a Super Bowl with so many subplots, it almost had to end this way.

Flacco's arrival as a champion quarterback coincides with Lewis' retirement.

The sibling rivalry between the coaching Harbaughs went to John, older than Jim by 15 months.

"How could it be any other way? It's never pretty. It's never perfect. But it's us," John Harbaugh said. "It was us today."

At four hours, 14 minutes, it was the longest Super Bowl ever. Among the most thrilling, too.

The loss of power delayed the game 34 minutes and left players from both sides stretching and chatting with each other. It also cost Baltimore whatever momentum it built, and that was considerable after Jacoby Jones' 108-yard kickoff return and game MVP Flacco's three touchdown passes made it 28-6.

Back came San Francisco (13-5-1) in search of its sixth Lombardi Trophy in as many tries.

Michael Crabtree's 31-yard touchdown reception on which he broke two tackles made it 28-13.

A couple minutes later, Frank Gore's six-yard run followed a 32-yard punt return by Ted Ginn Jr., and the 49ers were within eight.

Ray Rice's fumble at his 24 led to David Akers' 34-yard field goal, but Baltimore woke up for a drive leading to rookie Justin Tucker's 19-yard field goal.

San Francisco wasn't done challenging, though, and Colin Kaepernick's 15-yard TD run, the longest for a quarterback in a Super Bowl, made it 31-29. A two-point conversion pass failed when the Ravens blitzed.

Tucker added a 38-yarder with 4:19 remaining, setting up the frantic finish.

Kaepernick couldn't get the 49ers into the end zone on the final three plays — there was contact on Crabtree on the final pass that appeared incidental, and Jim Harbaugh insisted it was pass interference.

Ravens punter Sam Koch took a safety for the final score with four seconds left.

Bosh helps lift Heat to 100-85 win over Raptors

Chris Bosh lifted the Miami Heat to victory over his old team on Sunday — and then he thanked Toronto fans for helping him do so.

Bosh, who was received by a chorus of boos during team introductions, scored 13 of his 28 points in the fourth quarter as the Heat defeated the Raptors 100-85 on Sunday for their 10th consecutive victory over Toronto.

"I was hearing a lot from the fans," said Bosh, who departed for Miami in a sign-and-trade deal in the 2010 off-season. "I thank them for continuing to stay on me and call me names and stuff because that helped my focus a lot. I was like, 'I need to get in this to shut them up.'"

LeBron James poured in a game-high 30 points, while Dwyane Wade added 23 points for the Heat (30-14).

The loss spoiled strong efforts by new Raptors forward Rudy Gay, who scored 29 points, and DeMar DeRozan, who added 27.

"I wouldn't say I'm 100 per cent comfortable," said Gay, two days after joining his new team. "I'm still feeling my way out there. I still think this is a game we could've won. We still have a couple things to iron out in practice."

for Toronto (17-31), while Aaron Grey had a game-high 12 rebounds to go with six points.

Wade added 23 points for the Heat (30-14).

Raptors coach Dwane Casey knew the Heat would be hungry, coming off a 102-89 loss Friday in Indiana.

"They're going to be like a bunch of wet hens," Casey said before the game. "They're going to be really, really ready to play."

Toronto, meanwhile, was coming off a thrilling 98-73 victory over the Los Angeles Clippers in Gay's Raptors debut.

Toronto led by eight in the second quarter, but were trailing 71-67 by the end of the third, and six consecutive points by Bosh gave the Heat a six-point lead with 5:41 left.

"They're the defending champs," Gay said. "I say for three and a half quarters we played them as well as anybody in the league. The fact that we haven't been together for a long time, they exposed that in the fourth and a little bit in the third."

Raonic's win leads Canada over Spain in Davis Cup upset

Tennis. Canucks knock off No. 1-ranked side and advance to the second round Milos Raonic propelled Canada into the second round of the Davis Cup World Group Sunday.

Raonic beat Spain's Guillermo Garcia-Lopez in straight sets — 6-3, 6-4, 6-2 — at UBC's Doug Mitchell Thunderbird Sports Centre. The win gave Canada an insurmountable 3-1 lead in the best-of-five tie with one reverse singles match to play.

Raonic was rarely tested by Garcia-Lopez, ranked 82nd in the world, who made his first Davis Cup appearance. Garcia-Lopez was inserted into the do-or-die match by Spanish captain Alex Corretja, who made a late lineup change in a bid to right Spain's fortunes.

Canada entered play with a 2-1 lead and needed just one win in its final two singles matches to claim the tie.

Garcia-Lopez replaced Marcel Granollers, who was tagged as Spain's top singles player for this event as the five-time Davis Cup champion was missing its four top players.

Garcia-Lopez tried to counter Raonic's power with several cross-court shots in a bid to get the world's 15th-ranked player running around the court.

But Raonic, from Thornhill, Ont., had little difficulty returning Garcia-Lopez's attempts. Canada's top singles player got off to a hot start as he opened with back-to-back aces and won the game at love with a well-placed volley in the back corner opposite Garcia-Lopez. Raonic took a 3-2 lead in the first set with another ace as he launched a 220 km/h serve past his opponent.

After coming back to break Garcia-Lopez's serve in the sixth game, the players held serve the rest of the way as Raonic took the opening set 6-3.

A first

This marks the first time that Canada has advanced to the second round of the World Group level, which is open to the top 16 countries.

- Pre-tournament, Canada is ranked 12th on the Davis Cup table while Spain, which lost the 2012 final to the Czech Republic, entered the weekend No. 1.

Raonic maintained his momentum in the second set and started the third set with a service break and hold to go up 2-0. Raonic proceeded to break again and was well on his way.

Serving for the match, Raonic built up a 40-15 lead and closed out the historic win with an overhead smash.

Canada will host Italy in the quarter-finals in April.

Montreal Canadiens goaltender Carey Price makes a save against Ottawa Senator Daniel Alfredsson in Montreal on Sunday. With the Habs' 2-1 victory, Price has won six straight starts. GRAHAM HUGHES/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Habs' Pacioretty has knack for comebacks

NHL. Pacioretty returns ahead of schedule from appendix surgery to provide key assist in Montreal's victory

It took Max Pacioretty one shift to show he has completely recovered from appendix surgery.

Only eight days after an emergency appendectomy, the left-winger found a puck in the slot and slid it to the net for David Desharnais to tip in for a goal that helped the Montreal Canadiens to a 2-1 victory over the Ottawa Senators on Sunday afternoon.

Pacioretty, who was expected to be out for three to four weeks, looked strong as ever as he skated a regular shift on the top line with Desharnais and Erik Cole and picked up his fifth point in four games played this season.

"I just trusted that those two battling would make the right play, and it ended up right on my stick," he said of the goal that tied the game 1-1 at only 2:13 of the period after Jakob Silfverberg opened the scoring for Ottawa.

"That's what I mean about them doing the heavy lifting early on."

Pacioretty's ability to bounce back from injuries causes fans and even his teammates to shake their heads in wonder.

In the 2010-11 season, he was stretched off the Bell Centre with a concussion and a broken vertebrae in his neck after crashing head first into a stanchion. But he was back on his feet within days.

He missed the last 15 games of the regular season and the first round of the playoffs but might have been back if the Canadiens had gone further into the post-season.

He responded with a breakout, 33-goal season in 2011-12 and was awarded the Bill Masterton Trophy for persistence and dedication.

Pacioretty said resilience is something he has learned.

"I look at adversity as a good thing," he said. "I've had to deal with a lot in my career, whether it be injuries or getting sent down."

"I've had a bumpy road here in Montreal and I wouldn't change any of it for a second. It's made me the player and the person I am and I'm thankful to have got all these opportunities."

Cole had the winner later in the first period for the Canadiens (6-2-0), who swept home games on consecutive afternoons after a 6-1 win over the Buffalo Sabres on Saturday.

The Senators (5-3-1) were coming off a 1-0 loss in Carolina on Friday night and are struggling to score with top centre Jason Spezza out with a sore back.

Goaltenders Carey Price and Craig Anderson were both at the top of their games as Ottawa outshot Montreal 33-32.

Price may have caught a break as a goalie interference call nullified a goal by defenceman Andre Benoit 1:26

Chris Kunitz scored a hat trick in the Pittsburgh Penguins' Super Bowl Sunday visit to the nation's capital, leading a 6-3 win over the Washington Capitals.

• The Pens have won three straight and four of five to lead the Atlantic Division.

In Buffalo, defenceman Brian Campbell scored on the power play with 10:33 remaining to cap Florida's three-goal rally, and the Panthers beat the Buffalo Sabres 4-3 on Sunday.

• Peter Mueller, George Parros and Shawn Matthias also scored for the Panthers, who won their first road game of the season and snapped a seven-game road winless drought (0-5-2) dating to last season.

TaurusApril 21 - May 21

Your feelings run deep but you can't seem to find an adequate outlet for them. How frustrating! If all else fails try something physical, something that forces you to work up a sweat. Team sports, especially, will be fun.

GeminiMay 22 - June 21

You must be honest today. You must bring any bad feelings you may have towards people you work or do business with to the fore. The most important thing is that you can be truthful with one another.

CancerJune 22 - July 23

Expect the best today and it will most likely happen. Today's cosmic climate indicates that good thoughts will lead to good things occurring—but also that bad thoughts could lead to bad things. It's your call.

LeoJuly 24 - Aug. 23

Try not to allow materialistic issues to govern your life. Make a special effort to raise your sights above worldly things and you may discover something of unequalled value. There is more to life than making money.

VirgoAug. 24 - Sept. 23

You may be in an adventurous mood at the moment but the planets warn this is not the best time to take risks. Above all, don't let others persuade you to do things you do not feel comfortable with!

No matter what your responsibilities may be you owe it to yourself to leave them behind and take life easy for a while. The more you rest now the more you will make a good job of your duties later on.

SagittariusNov. 23 - Dec. 21

A domestic matter of some kind has to be dealt with—not tomorrow or the day after but right now. Take everyone's feelings into consideration but then make a decision—and make sure everyone follows it.

CapricornDec. 22 - Jan. 20

The planets warn that no matter how much you desire a particular object once you have got it you will realize it was not what you wanted at all. You are searching for something deeper, so look inside yourself.

AquariusJan. 21 - Feb. 19

You may be sociable by nature but watch out who you make friends with this coming week. Some people are genuine, of course, but others want to get close to you for financial reasons. You're not that gullible, are you?

PiscesFeb. 20 - March 20

Mars links with your ruler Neptune in your birth sign today, which will help you to take the initiative and get everyone around you working towards the same goals. You should be this more often!
